TRENT ON TRAVEL.

Says Volcano House is an Ideal Place to Go.

R. H. Trent, who has been at the Volcano House for the past week, goes home to Honolulu by the Kinai today. Mr. Trent was greatly pleased with the improvements that have been made at the Volcano House by Manager Bidgood. He says the hostelry has been completely changed in appearance and guests can have but few wants that will not be satisfied.

Mr. Trent, who handles the tourist business for this island at Honolulu, says the movement to secure greater tourist travel is suffering on account of a lack of unanimity. He believes the Honolulu people will eventually get on the right track and that results will be forthcoming. He finds among the traveling public some hesitation at undertaking the island excursion, but in no case has he heard of a single complaint from any who have gone to the Volcano. Mr. Trent advocates an All-Island show for tourists. He does not believe that Honolulu alone or Hilo alone can satisfy the visitor. Its the altogether proposition that will win in building up a heavy tourist travel.

Mr. Trent is anxious for the day to come when Hilo can open to the public a big commodious modern hotel. He thinks nothing would do more good for the town and tourist travel.

SHERIFF PROTECTS OFFICER.

Refuses to Permit Trial for Assault on Woman.

An important point of law procedure will be argued before Judge Hapai Monday morning. It is the question whether a Court must follow the Sheriff in entering a nolle prosequi in a criminal case or whether there may be discretion exercised. Sheriff Andrews will deny that the Court has discretionary power in the matter, and LeBlond & Smith will support the contention that the Court is greater than the Sheriff.

The case came up in a manner not complimentary to the Sheriff's department. One Japanese Samedi, said by some to be a spy for the police, and by the Sheriff held to be an officer on the force, got into trouble recently in a Japanese home on Front street. He entered an upstairs room occupied by a woman, Kano, by name and plied her with many questions. The woman, who was in a delicate condition, was unable to satisfy the curiosity of her visitor. He became enraged, caught her by the hair and kimono and dragged her down stairs. At the foot of the stairs two other Japanese interfered and caused the officer to desist. Samedi was armed with neither warrant or officer's badge and is said to have been under the influence of liquor.

The woman who was badly cuffed and bruised, through friends employed LeBlond & Smith to prosecute her assailant. The case was continued once or twice and came up for trial Wednesday. The Deputy Sheriff stated that he had been instructed by the Sheriff to nolle prosequi the case. Mr. Smith opposed this, contending that the Court was not obliged to dismiss a case merely because the Sheriff desired it. He claimed it was at least discretionary with the judge and that the Court knew enough of the facts in the case to warrant it in ordering a trial. Counsel claimed that if one guilty of such outrages as in this case could escape trial merely through the friendship of the Sheriff, then society would be without protection from thugs, especially if they happened to be on the police force.

The Court ruled that if the Sheriff moved a nolle prosequi, it was the judge's business to dismiss the case and Samedi was turned loose.

The attorneys for the injured woman held a further consultation and decided to draw out a new warrant. This they did and took it to the Sheriff for his O. K. He wrote on the warrant that he did not think the law had been broken; that the judge could have the arrest made if he chose but that the case would be nolle prosequi, if it came to a trial.

The attorneys have agreed to argue Monday the point above set forth.
